HORSES LIPS

Curling in horse lips

Horses have prehensile lips, meaning they can be used for grasping , seizing or taking hold of something. Lip twitching and trembling can be related or unrelated to eating. Some horses flap their lips loudly when they are nervous or anxious, or anticipating an undesirable event. Recognize that a variety of lip movements can be considered normal. The Flehmen response is a biological response to smell. The curling back of the upper lip (and often pulling their heads back at the same time) helps activate an organ that allows horses to sense chemicals in the air, particularly pheromones.

THE NON-WOVENS

Nonwovens are the fabric that is not manufactured by either weaving, knotting, crocheting or knitting. The nonwovens come in different aspects, many of which are webs of fibers that are held together by variant means such as thermal bonding, chemical solvents, adhesive agents or mechanical action. The oldest of nonwoven is 'felt'. They were made from wool fibers that would cling together when brought to moisture, pressure and heat. The earliest of the felt textile could be found in the archeological sites. Currently, nonwovens are manufactured from wool in general along with other fibers, which would require additional treatment so as to bond distinct fibers together. Bark Cloth is another kind of nonwoven made by the pre-industrial people, but this kind of cloth is not manufactured for commercial use.

A CAR THAT RESHAPED BMW

Years ago BMW did not stand on the podium it stands today. Due to the hits from the World War II followed by the approaching downfall, the brand had to face a lot of losses.

During that time of downfall only a new vision could save BMW and this vision was brought in by Max Hoffman, a noted European car importer from New York. He saw an opportunity wherein BMW could sell halo cars in dealership.

It was then that BMW 507 took birth and the rest remains history.
