POLO IN ITALY

Argentario Polo Club

 Italy

Born in the 80s from the idea of a group of enthusiastic polo players from different Italian and foreign cities to consummate the dream of playing Polo in a beautiful location like Monte Argentario, the Argentario Polo Club is located in the plain of a promontory, between olive groves and vineyards. Known for its natural beauty, the club is surrounded by hills that form a beautiful natural coliseum in front of the Orbetello Lagoon. From its inception in the year 1987, the Argentario Polo Club has witnessed some of the best Italian Polo tournaments and matches, making it a center of sporting excellence. The months of July and August are the days of action at the coveted club, that hosts Polo with a succession of events of great sporting importance.

Ramped cheek teeth are similar to hooks but have a more gradual slope to the tooth and can also be on the front or back, upper or lower cheek teeth.

They typically are on premolars with a surface that slopes like a ski jump. Ramps can cut, pinch or scrape the tongue or cheek, especially when a horse is bitten.

Regular dental work is required on horses to avoid formation of ramps. It is very important to bitseat in such cases to avoid damage to the soft tissues.

What is it called when a horse grabs on something, like a fence or stall, and swallow air. It is a bad habit that is hard to correct. It is mentally addictive and learned from other horses that do the same.

The trend of the turtlenecks

Image: Gentleman's Gazette

22

During the 16th century, the fetish for turtlenecks was opted by the regal people, like Queen Elizabeth I, who wore high neck gowns, embellished with fluffy ruffles, tassels or sequins. Such elements symbolizes the high status and class of the people and were also incredibly handy for hiding any pesky skin conditions creeping up one's neck.

Image: Taste of Runway

By the start of 20th century the fad of turtlenecks waded its way down to the women's wardrobe. Therefore, the turtleneck went from the working men's wardrobe to a seductive bombshell style. Women of that bygone era started pairing up their minimalistic high neck skivvy that was sans any embellishments, motifs or sequins thereby exuding out a classic and iconic look. The turtleneck became a trendsetter with the rise of 'Gibson girl' a fictional character, who has been described as a 'visual ideal' for fashion from 1890 to 1920.

1. L'HOMME QUI MARCHE- The Walking Man
The walking man has a long history to it for it took many sessions to create this iconic figure. It is said that the L'Homme Qui Marche is composed of a variety of distinguished studies which took place over the formation of other sculptures. Auguste Rodin started off his work over preparatory studies in the year 1877. These studies of Rodin led to the formation of a sculpture called 'John the Baptist' in the year 1880. The modelling of the 'John the Baptist' sculpture was done by two Italian men.

3. HERMES WHITE HIMALAYA CROCODILE BIRKIN BAG

The Hermes White Himalaya Crocodile Birkin Bag is a filthy luxurious hand-made bag with more than 240 massive diamonds embellished on it's skin. It has an 18 carat gold hardware and is, undoubtedly, the most expensive bag. The Hermes whitw Himalaya bag is colored in such a way that it looks like a sort of a mountain range. Hermes White Himalaya is said to be, possibly, the rarest and most desirable bag in the world.

Why Fashion Must Become Sustainable?

When it comes to fashion, we have more choices than ever before. However, we are also becoming increasingly aware of the impact fast fashion is having on our planet and the people and animals involved in the manufacture of textiles. There are a number of reasons as to why fashion needs to change. In this post, we look at six key reasons as to why fashion must become more sustainable.

1. The chemicals used in textile production can be harmful to animals, the environment and even human health

You may never have even thought about it, but how aware are you of what it takes to make the bright colours of your clothes stand out?

There are a number of hazardous chemicals routinely used in clothing production. These chemicals are polluting our seas, and may even have a harmful effect on human health, particularly those who work in clothing manufacture.

2. The packaging produced by fashion brands can have a huge impact on the environment

There has been a huge shift in what consumers think about product and packaging waste, and as a result, brands are stepping up to take action. Brands, for example, aim to divert 100% of their waste away from landfill by 2020.

History of Alcohol and Liquor

Although the origin of alcohol is quite obscure, but presumably it was a result of a serendipitous coincidence or accident that occurred almost 10,000 years ago. The artifacts and relics, including the beer jugs from the late stone age, proved that beer was invented as early as the bygone Neolithic period. And conceivably, it was prepared by the fermentation of honey, sugar, rice or bread, since back in the bygone epoch it was the only way of producing liquor. It was followed by the time when the middle-east region of Egypt started nestling breweries and cellars for the incessant manufacturing of hard alcohol like beer. It was the time when the distillation of alcohol was done in the cellars in order to increase the percentage of alcohol for pungent and stark effects on body.

In the ancient Egyptian civilization 'Osiris', the god of wine was revered and glorified throughout the people of that middle east region. Egypt had an imperative contribution in the evolution of beer since they made at least 17 types of beer and 24 kinds of authentic and bespoke wines.
